The above matrix provides a general idea of which countries offer more opportunities in the departments that may be of interest to you. If you are interested in a particular country that has not been mentioned, please ask. New destinations with worthwhile placements are added from time to time due to popular requests from students.

Elective placements in Fiji are available for students in their final 1-2 years of training and you need to commit to one department (ie rotations are not available). Placements in Namibia are in a remote clinic providing primary health care. Most other destinations welcome you to rotate through various departments that are of interest to you.
